Clearwater, Florida - In an effort to prevent more car versus pedestrian accidents, the state has announced it will be adding crossing flags at 37 different locations along Gulf Blvd. in Pinellas County.

The City of Clearwater first introduced the flags six years ago. Clearwater traffic operations manager Paul Bertels says they got the idea from Salt Lake City. Bertels says they now have the flags at eight different locations and he believes they have prevented accidents and saved lives.

"What it does is it kind of shows a sign of authority to the motorist because the person is walking across the street with this flag in their hand," Bertels told 10 Connects. "It's kind of like the flagman at the school bus stop or the flagman in the construction zone, people are kind of subconsciously trained to pay attention to that."

Once a person has crossed the street, they are supposed to leave the flag for the next person.

Audrey Cunin of Clearwater uses the flags and says they do help. "Because some (drivers) will not stop so you take the flag and you flag them own."

The Florida Department of Transportation says they expect to have the new flags out by the end of July. They will be at locations along Gulf Blvd. from The Don Cesar Hotel north to Walsingham Road.

But unlike the red flags used in Clearwater, an

More flags by JULY????? How much time does it take to make a very simple Flag?? I thought it was May, that's a long time, may-be more deaths too! This sickens me. BUT, this is our Government!

Most of the problem has been people don't always cross in a crosswalk.They come out between cars,and just don't look. Then we have thjese fools who are driving, talking on phones or texting because the speedlimit is only 35mph all down this road they feel safe doing so. It's just common sense look both ways before crossing the street just like your mom told you!
